Dickeus can be read by us now with dit; Elijah Pogram, Hannibal Choid, Jefferson Brick and Scadder have it representatives today, pienty of us, and the wise thing for us to do to recognize that these are stillers of evil in politics, journalism siness, and private life, and to wardnest them with all our hearts. But a rank folly to regard these as they, or the chief, types in our national. It was not of much consequence ther Dickeus made such an error or, but it would be of great consence if we ourselves did; for a foolish simism is an even greater fee of they national growth than a foologithism. It was not that Dickens rented characters or scenes that milnism. It was not that Dickens ated characters or scenes that no basis in fact; on the contrary, t he said was true, as far as it to the trouble was that of many the trouble was that of many balf truths be made a picture has a whole was absurd; for oft-half truth is the most dangerous hood. It is be foolish to ignore their exce, or the existence of anything he foolish to ignore their ex-t, or the existence of anything hat is bad in our national life; would be even more foolish to the vaster forces that tell for susness. same rules that are necessary in get-ting on with our neighbors in our sev-eral neighborhoods; and the nation as a whole should show substantially the same qualities that we would expect an honorable man to show in dealing with his fellows. To illustrate this, consider for a moment two phases of governmental action.

MAN THAT IS A MAN.

MAN THAT IS A MAN.

First as to international affairs. Among your own neighbors, among your friends, what is the attitude you like to see a man take toward his fellows, the attitude you wish each of your sons to take when he goes out into the world? Is it not a combination of readiness and ability to hold his own if anyone tries to wrong him, while at the same time showing careful regard not only for the rights but for the feelings of others? Of course it is! Of course the type of man whom we respect, whom we are proud of if he is a kinsman, whom we are glad to have as a friend and neighbor, is the man who is no milksop, who is not afraid, who will not tolerate nor hesitate to resent insult or injury, but who himself never inflicts insult or injury, is kindly, good-natured, thoughtful of others' rights—in short, a good man to do business with or have live in the next house or have as a friend. On the other hand, the man who tacks any of those qualities is sure to be objectionable. If a man is afraid to hold his own, if ne will submit tamely to wrongdoing, he is contemptible. If he is a bully, an oppressor, a man who wrongs or insults others, he is even worse and should be hunted out of the community. But, on the whole, the most contemptible position that can possibly be assumed by any man is that of blustering of bragging, of insulting or wronging other people, while yet expecting to go through life unchalinenged, and being always willing to back down and accept humiliation if readiness to make good is demanded.

Well, all this is just as true of a nation as of an individual, and in dealing with other nations we should act as we expect a man who is both game and decent to act in private life. There are few things cheaper and more objectionable, whether on the part of the public man or of the private man, on the part of a writer or of a speaker, an individual or a group of individuals, than a course of conduct which is insulting or hurtful, whether in speech or act, to individuals of another nation or to the representatives of another nation or to another pation itself. But the policy becomes infamous from the standpoint of the interests of the United States when it is combined with the refusal to take those measures of preparation which can alone secure us from aggression on the part of others. HOW NATIONS SHOULD ACT. preparation which can alone secure us rom aggression on the part of others. The policy of "peace with insulf" is he very worst policy upon which it is possible to embark, whether for a tation or an individual. To be rich, marmed, and yet insolent and aggressive, is to court well-nigh certain literator.

SAFE FOREIGN POLICY.

SAFE POREIGN POLICY.

The only safe and honorable rule of foreign policy for the United States is to show itself courteous toward other nation on earth with such a high standard of living and of industrial efficiency among its workers. We have as a nation an era of unexampled prosperity ahead of us; we shall enjoy it, and our children will enjoy it after us. The trend of well-being in this country is unward, not downward; and this is the frend in the things of the soul as well as in the things of the soul as well as in the things of the soul as well as in the things of the body. Government in its application is often a complicated and delicate work, but the principles of government are, after all, tairly simple. In a broad general way we should apply in the affairs of the national administration, which deals with the interests of all our eighty-odd millions of people, just the

The second requisite is more easily secured—let us build up and maintain at the highest point of efficiency the United States bary. In any great war on land we should have to rely in the future as we have relied in the past chiefly upon volunteer diders; and although it is indispensable that our little army, an army ludicrously small relatively to the wealth and population of this mighty nation, should itself be trained to the highest point and should be valued and respected as is demanded by the worth of the officers and enlisted men, yet it is not necessary that this army should be large as compared to the armies of other great nations. But as regards the navy all this is different. We have an enormous coast line, and our coast line is on two great oceans. To repel hostile attacks the fortifications, and not the navy must be used; but the best way to parry is to hit—no fight can ever be won except by Eltting—and we can only hit by means of the navy. It is utterly impossible to improvise even a makeshift navy under the conditions of modern warfare. Since the days of Napoleon no war between two great powers has lasted as long as it would take to bind a battleship, let alone a fleet of battleships; and it takes just as long to train the crew of a battleship as it does to build it; and as regards the most important thine of all, the training given in time of peace. When once war has broken out it is too late to do anything. We now have a good navy, not yet large enough to any mode and every must be build and all its training the officers, it takes much longer. The navy must be built and all its training given in time of peace. When once war has broken out it is too late to do anything. We now have a good navy, not yet large enough the new officers, it takes much longer. The navy must be built and all test to do anything. GREAT NAVY NEEDED. broken out it is too late to do anything. We now have a good navy, not yet large enough for our needs, but of excellent material. Where a navy is as small as ours, the cardinal rule must be that the battleships shall not be separated.

NEW NAVAL POLICY.

This year I am happy to say that we shall be in a course which I hope will be stadily followed hereafter, that, namely, of keeping the battleship fleet alternately in the Pacific and in the Atlantic. Early in December the fleet will begin its voyage to the Pacific, and it will number, friends, among its formidable fighting craft three great battleships, named, respectively, the Illinois, the Missouri, and the Kentucky. It is a national fleet in every sense of the term, and its welfare should be, and I firmly believe is, as much a matter of pride and concern for every man in the farthest interior of our country as for every man on the seascast. A long ocean voyage is mighty good training, and not the least good it will do will be to show just the points where our naval program needs strengthening. Incidentally I think the voyage will have one good effect, for, to judge by their comments on the movement, some excellent people in my own section of the country need to be reminded that the Pacific coast is exactly as much a part of this nation as the Atlantic coast. coast is exactly as much a part of this nation as the Atlantic coast. THE STATES AND THE NATION.

nation as the Atlantic coast.

THE STATES AND THE NATION.

So much of foreign affairs. Now for a matter of domestic policy. Here in this country we have founded a great federal democratic republic. It is a government by and for the people and therefore a genuine democracy; and the theory of our Constitution is that each neighborhool shall be left to deal with the things that concern only itself and which is can most readily deal with; so that town, country, city and state have their respective spheres of duty, while the nation deals with those matters which concern all of us, all of the people, no matter where we dwell. Our democracy is based upon the belief that each individual ought to have the largest measure of liberty compatible with securing the rights of other individuals, that the average citizen, the plain man whom we meet in daily life, is normally canable of taking care of his own affairs, and has no desire to wrong any one clas; and yet that in the interest of all there shall be sufficient power lodged somewhere to prevent wicked recople from trampling the weak under foot for their own gain. Our constant endeavor is to make a good working compromise whereby we shall secure the full benefit of individual initiative and responsibility, while at the same time recognizing that it is the function of a wise government under modern conditions not merely to protect life and property, but to foster the social evelopment of the people so far as this may be done by maintaining and promoting justice, honesty, and equal rights.

A REAL DEMOCRACY.

A REAL DEMOCRACY.

We believe in a real, not a sham, democracy. We believe in democracy as regards political rights, as regards education, and, finally as regards industrial ronditions. By democracy we understand securing, as far as it is humanly possible to secure it, equality of opportunity, equality of the conditions under which each man is to show the stuff that is in him and to achieve the measure of success to which his own force of mind and character entitle him. Resigiously this means that each man is to have the right, unhindered by the state, to worship his Creator as his conscience dictates, granting freely to others the same freedom which he asks

INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS.

INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS.

Politically we can be said substanitally to have worked out our democratic ideals, and the same is trus, thanks to the common schools, in educational matters. But in industry there has not as yet been the governmental growth necessary in order to meet the tremendous changes brought about in industrial conditions by steam and electricity. It is not in accordance with our principles that itterally despothe power should be put into the hands of a few men in the affairs of the industrial world. Our efforts must be for a just and effective plan of action which, while scrupulouely safeguarding the rights of men of wealth, shall yet, so ar as is humanly possible, secure unier the law to all men equality of opportunity to make a living. It is to the interest of all of us that the man of exceptional business capacity should be amply rewarded; and there is nothing inconsistent with this in our insistence that he shall not be guility of bribery or extortion, and that the rights of the wageworker and of the man of small means, who are themselves honest and hard working, shall be scrupulously safe-guarded. The instruments for the exception of modern industrial power are the great corporations which though created by the individual states, have grown far beyond the control of those states and transact their business throughout large sections of the Union.
